BICYCLE TRUST

Disastrous Experience of a Combine Having Interest in Plymouth.

The bicycle trust was formed to prevent the ruinous competition incident to twice as many factories as were needed to stock the market. When the bicycle craze was at its height factories sprang up on every hand, the builders seeming not to realize that there could be a limit to the demand, or that in time few people would use the wheel for recreation. Owners of factories and promoters put their heads together to form a single company which should buy and close many of the factories and thus enable the one company to limit production and control prices. The combination was made when many manufacturers had realized that the falling off in the use of bicycles would compel the closing of many factories. This was two years ago. The capitalization of the combination was not excessive compared with other trusts, yet it was said at the time that the several companies bought up received a generous price for their plants. Quite a number of the plants were closed, yet they represented money or bonds upon which interest must be paid if not earned. The second annual meeting of the bicycle trust was recently held. It seems to have been a bad year for bicycles. At any rate, the earnings would have paid a 3 per cent dividend on the common stock, had not the money thus earned been needed for a reserve fund, but being thus needed the shareholders did not receive a cent. Nor does the future present any encouragement, since the earnings promise to be less this year than last. As the bicycle has ceased to be a fad and has become a convenience to people whose business requires them to go from place to place rapidly, there will be a steady demand. The extent of the dead investment by this combination appears in the fact that of the twenty-eight plants purchased only ten were operated the past year. The discarded factories may be sold at a loss for other purposes, but the machinery cannot have any part of the value which it cost the consolidated company. The company charged off as loss nearly a million and a half of dollars the past year, while the loss on machinery by wear and tear is put at a million dollars.

The bicycle trust is not alone in this condition. The same thing has appeared in a dozen other trusts. All of the trusts have purchased competing plants at extravagant prices. During times of great prosperity the trust managers to pay dividends, but when a reaction comes stockholders must suffer loss. Already there have been enough of such collapses to warn people against investing in overcapitalized enterprises. Another and a constant danger is the appearance of fresh competitors whose plants represent only the actual cost of construction. Such plants can earn dividends upon profits which would be ruinous to the owners or plants which are capitalized for two or three times their actual value. Thus it begins to appear that the overcapitalization which has been denounced because the managers of such plants would compel the people to pay exorbitant prices in order to pay dividends on watered stock is more likely to involve the shareholders in heavy loss than to be a burden upon consumers.—Indianapolis Journal.

Wedded at Warsaw.

A very pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mrs. John Baril, on S. Scott street, at which Miss Erma T. Philpott was united to Clark M. Holbrook, the Rev. W. A. Pavy officiating at the ceremony. The interesting event was witnessed by about one hundred guests, relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. An elaborate wedding supper was served and the bride couple received a large number of handsome as well as useful presents. Both the bride and groom are well and favorably known in this city, and will reside in apartments on N. Buffalo street already prepared for their occupancy.—Warsaw Times.

Wage Law Upheld.

Judge Fox of the Wayne circuit court last week overruled the demurrer of the defendant in the case of James H. Edwards against the city of Richmond and held the state wage law to be constitutional. The law provides that unskilled labor in the employ of the state or counties, cities and towns must be paid 20 cents an hour. The city of Richmond declined to pay the legal rate on the ground that the law was unconstitutional. Edwards and many other street laborers brought suit. Judge Fox holds that the state has the right to fix wages for labor on any public work. Labor unions claim a victory in the decision.

BUSY DAYS IN COURT

Leonard Gets His Order—Smith Boy Not Bad—Insurance Money Paid—Other News Items.

The case of Mellie M. Potter vs John S. Potter, for divorce was heard Thursday and the plaintiff was given a decree freeing her from the bonds of matrimony.

Noah Smith filed a petition asking that his son Raymond be sent to the reform school. The boy is fourteen years old and is said to be bad. He fought his teacher in school Thursday.

Judge Capron engaged Thursday afternoon in hearing a motion to dissolve the restraining order in the Laporte gravel road case. Jerry Collins and brother, F. E. Osborne and M. R. Sutherland are the Laporte county lawyers making the arguments.

William Campbell, in jail under a charge of rape, told the court he was unable to employ an attorney to defend him and Judge Hess was appointed for that unwelcome service.

In the case of Andrew J. Ritter vs Elizabeth Rannels et al, for partition, a decree was entered and the property ordered to be sold. A suit to quiet title brought by Lonzo Ransbottom against Daniel C. Berkey was decided for the plaintiff. William Johnson obtained a judgment on a note against Judy E. Truex.

The petition of County Assessor Leonard for permission to examine the books of the Plymouth State bank in search of a deposit of money by William Schofield and withheld from taxation, was granted and the court made the order against the bank.

An ex parte petition was filed by Thomas Houghton, administrator of the estate of Luther Houghton, deceased, and the Knights and Ladies of Columbia, to determine the rights of heirs to insurance money amounting to $2,000. The society had paid the money into court, being unable to determine to whom it belonged, and the court ordered it distributed to all the heirs in equal portions. It was entirely a friendly action among all the parties.

The application of Noah Smith to have his son Raymond sent to the reform school was withdrawn and the lad given another chance. In this connection Miss Baker, the boy's teacher, informs us that Raymond is by no means an unusually bad or untractable pupil and that Mr. Smith was mistaken in thinking there was anything like a fight in the school. Miss Baker had occasion to discipline Raymond slightly Thursday forenoon but there was no trouble over it and the lad regards her as his friend. It is likely that her influence, joined with that of the parents, will easily overcome any surplus of spirits that might tend to lead the boy astray.

Mary E. Littleton, of Argos, has begun divorce proceedings against her husband, Langdon W. Littleton, on the ground of abandonment. They were married in 1884 and separated in 1897. She asks the custody of their two children, aged 15 and 11 years.

The estates of James H. McElrath and Jacob Stevick were settled and ordered closed. A final report was filed in the estate of Catherine Corbin and set for Nov. 15 for hearing. In the estate of John Rhodes the administrator filed a petition to settle as insolvent. Reports of real estate sales were made and approved in the estates of William D. Voreis and Henry Whitesell.

A license to practice law was issued to William Everly, who was admitted at the present term.

Cora Dale's Opera.

Only four people went from Goshen and four from Elkhart to attend the presentation of the operetta by Miss Cora Dale at the Oliver House in South Bend last night. The raising of the curtain was delayed until after half past eight by a discussion over the rent of the Opera House, which was finally settled and the show proceeded. Those who were present from here are not enthusiastic in their praise of the entertainment, and the criticisms of the operetta do not fore-shadow for its remarkable success. The failure of the persons selected for the presentation to do their part in a proper way may explain to a certain extent the limitations of the production, and Miss Dale's friends in this city will regret to learn that the initial presentation was so poorly made.—Elkhart Review.

Our Kind Neighbors.

W. H. Albert, a Plymouth restaurant proprietor, was in this city today for the purpose of securing a store room and locating here. People who live in the city whose name always recalls to our mind something "rocky," through the landing of the Puritans, appear to want something better than Marshall county's capital affords. Mishawaka has scores who formerly resided there and they are good people, too, whom we are pleased to get.—Mishawaka correspondence, South Bend Times.
